Our Speaker: Jennifer Harsha Carroll

Topic: Writing Stories, Sharing Passions, and Creating Legacies

Jennifer Carroll has a lifelong passion for helping others write, find connections, and tell stories. She is a writing coach, editor and ghostwriter with independent authors and for Traverse City-based publisher, Mission Point Press. She has coached and edited seven books by Michigan authors, including Norwood resident Charles Cleland's sequel to Adventures of a Fur Trader to be published in spring 2020.

Jennifer has deep roots in Charlevoix. Her great-grandparents moved to the area in the 1880s. Her grandfather, Paul Harsha, was raised in the family home on State Street, now the Museum at Harsha House and offices of the Charlevoix Historical Society.

Jennifer is a MSU graduate and served in four newspapers in reporting, writing, coaching and top editing roles including as a reporter for the Times Herald in Port Huron, managing editor at the Lansing State Journal, and Detroit News and as executive editor for the Burlington (VT) Free Press.

She and her husband, Stan, have two daughters and live on Lake Michigan. In addition to professional book editing, Jennifer enjoys helping others compile memoirs and synthesize journals into legacies. Come, tap into the power of your own personal stories with her.
